

Back pain – a universal problem.

Pain in the lower back can now be alleviated by a targeted support.

There are many different causes of back pain. Pain in the lower back, where the vertebral column and the pelvis meet, is particularly common. This place is known as the iliosacral joint. About one quarter of back aches have their origin below the lumbar column, the lower part of the back at the iliosacral joint. Often the pain occurs suddenly while standing or sitting for a long time or when getting up. The pain can also spread from the back area:

- to the rear of the thigh;
- to the hip;
- to the groin and buttocks.

If this type of back pain becomes acute, it may hinder mobility. Bauerfeind has developed a new support for just that problem: SacroLoc®. The support acts exactly where the pain is located: in the lower part of the back, at the iliosacral joints. SacroLoc® helps to alleviate acute pain and prevent recurrences.
